St. Martin of Tours (316-397)

St. Martin of Tours born in Panonia (present day Hungary) was the son of a Roman military tribune, who moved with his family to Pavia (Italy) when Martin was young. As a young man he felt attracted to Christianity, much against the wishes of his pagan parents.

There is a very famous episode of his life. He was a knight of the Imperial Guard, which he had entered at the age of 15. On a very cold winter's day in Amiens (France) he met a poor man trembling with cold, begging him for some money. Moved by the compassion that characterised him, yet having nothing else to give the poor man, he cut his own cloak in two with his sword, and gave half of it to the poor man. Soon after that, in a dream, he saw Jesus smiling and wrapped in a half cloak saying: "Martin, today you have covered me with your cloak"

After that vision, Martin became baptised and left the military. He founded a monastery, under the guidance of St. Hilary of Poitiers. In 372, he was consecrated Bishop of Tours. Martin was a great missionary and over the 27 years when he was Bishop, he gave himself totally for the evangelisation of his diocese.

He died on November 8th 397, and was buried in Tours on November 11th. As we honour him this weekend, let us imitate his generosity.
